

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

F.F.B. (Yale University and Harvard University)

Patron of the Fine Arts (Catholic University)

It is with a deep sense of gratitude that this volume is affectionately dedicated to that patron of art, science, and letters, Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan, whose death was announced while it was in press.

Few will ever realize fully the magnitude of Mr. Morgan's philanthropy, always done in such a self-effacing manner, the extent of his generous zeal and pre-eminent service in the varied interests of research, and the real motive which actuated him in assembling and preserving the greatest creations of man.

In the field of Archaeology Mr. Morgan was deeply interested in recovering monuments and records from the ruin hills of the past, by the help of which the decipherer could reconstruct and illustrate the life and history of the ancient peoples. But not this alone, for as he himself expressed it, he hoped that material evidence would be discovered which would substantiate the historical value of the Bible. With these and other objects in view, excavations in Egypt were fostered, and ancient records of Babylonia and priceless manuscripts were secured.

Mr. Morgan was not content merely with collecting such materials, and giving those who were interested an opportunity to see and study them; it was his desire that they should be made accessible to scholars everywhere, hence such publications as this. Truly a great mind and a great heart!

INTRODUCTION

Mr. U

INTRODUCTION.

Few fully realize to what extent the legal literature of the ancient Babylonians and Assyrians furnishes us with the material from which deductions as to the life and manners of those peoples are made, and also with valuable historical and topographical data for the reconstruction of the history of the land. Moreover, so much light has been thrown, in recent years, upon Babylonia in the late pre-Christian centuries, that it is no longer reasonable for the historian to close his history of the people with the overthrow of the Neo-Babylonian dynasty under Cyrus.

The fifty-six texts here published have been selected from a group of more than a hundred, most of which are large in size. They were written in the Seleucid era (which began 312 B. C.), and bear dates between the 8th and the 173rd years (304 to 139 B. C.) of the era. They were dated at Erech, and were, doubtless, found by Arabs in the ruins of the city.

The script of the tablets, with the exception of an occasional peculiarity, is the same as that which was used throughout the Neo-Babylonian period. Most of the tablets were baked. Some were made of clay, which, when burned, became quite light in color, not unlike certain religious texts, which belong to the same era, and which came from the same city, doubtless, from the same quarters, containing the temple archives.

The new material, including the unpublished texts in Mr. Morgan's Library, cited M(organ) L(ibrary) C(ollection), as well as the two texts, published in Part I, cited B(abylonian) R(ecords) M(organ), and other published texts of the same era, furnish us with data which make some revisions possible in the chronology of the period.

According to Strassmaier, ZA. VIII, p. 108, Antiochus and Seleucus reigned in the 49th year. Further, it is maintained that Seleucus had been associated as joint king from the earlier years of the reign, till some time between 269 and 265 B. C.¹ While Antiochus I (Soter) had made Seleucus co-regent in the early part of his reign, the latter had been killed some time prior to the 39th year (273 B. C.), for the co-regent was then his son, also named Antiochus, if the 39th year for An(ti'kusu) u An(ti'kusu) šarrâni, ZA. VIII, p. 108, is correctly given. It, therefore, must have been prior to 273 B. C. that he had been put to death. Moreover, the 46th year of ZA. VIII, p. 108, and perhaps also text No. 88, show that Antiochus was joint ruler already in 266 B. C.

Another difficult date to reconcile is the 59th year of Seleucus, cf. ZA. VIII, p. 109, and especially as Strassmaier records a 59th year for Antiochus, which should be expected; cf. also text No. 16, dated in the 57th year, and MLC. 2161, dated in the 61st year of Antiochus. It seems that this must be an error.

Antiochus III (the great king) must have begun to reign 222 B. C. (90th year), instead of 223rd or 224th year, as is held. This is determined by ZA. VIII, p. 109, which gives the earliest date for this ruler, namely, the 90th year. It is scarcely possible also that the text published in ZA. VIII, p. 150, which is dated in the 94th year, belongs to the reign of Seleucus.¹

Antiochus V (Eupator) was associated with his father several years before 170 B. C.² This is determined by MLC. 2156, which shows that he was on the throne already on the 22nd of Iyyar, of the 138th year, which is 174 B. C. MLC. 2197 gives us the 138th year for both rulers, and text No. 38, the 139th year.

The fact that the latest tablet from Erech, No. 52, is dated in the Arsacid period instead of the Seleucid, shows that in or before the year 139 B. C., the city transferred its allegiance to the contemporary rulers. In fact at present only one cuneiform inscription from Babylonia is published³ that is dated subsequently in the Seleucid era, namely in the reign of Antiochus VII (Sidetes) at Babylon, on the 22nd of Iyyar, of the 82nd year of the era (130 B. C.). This seems to be the very year that the Seleucid army was temporarily victorious over the Arsacidæ. All other documents seem to indicate that the Babylonian cities had acknowledged the Parthian supremacy. But although Arsacid rulers supplanted the Seleucid, the Babylonians continued to recognize the Seleucid reckoning of years, for in the dating of their documents both were generally employed, e. g., No. 52 reads: šattu 109^{ken} "A-ri-sak-' šarru ša šī-i šattu 173^{ken}, "109th year of Arisak', the king, which is the 173rd year" (i. e., of the Seleucid era).

Text No. 53 furnishes us with the name of a new co-regent, who was the mother of the king. Her name, 'Ri...nu, is unfortunately incomplete. The nearest approach to the name seems to be 'Pivawv. The tablet is so injured that the date is also wanting. This makes it impossible to determine exactly which of the Arsacid rulers the king was; and whether it was dated earlier or later than No. 52, which has been discussed above. Moreover, the fact that the scribe of No. 52, dated in the 109th year of the Arsacid era, is doubtless the same as in No. 53, which is suggested by the character of the script, as well as the name of the scribe's father, makes it reasonable to infer that Ar-sak' of No. 53 probably is the same; or, if this is not correct, that he ruled at least near the time of the other.

Following is a table, which is based on the published texts and transliterations of texts of this period, as well as on the unpublished texts in Mr. Morgan's Library, giving the earliest and latest known dates from cuneiform sources of each reign of the Seleucid kings. Unfortunately, the months and days of those cited in ZA. VIII are not given.

Although Seleucus Nicator transferred the capitol from Babylon to the new Seleucus on the Tigris, which city developed while Babylon decayed, still the ancient cult was maintained in the old center. From Greek sources we learn that at Babylon, Borsippa, Erech, and Sippar, the ancient customs were continued. We learn from Strabo² that at Borsippa, Erech, and Sippar the temple schools had been maintained. The evidence of the religious texts dated at Babylon and Erech, which have been found, alone are sufficient to verify this statement. These texts indicate also in a general way that the ancient religion of Erech had maintained its influence upon the people up to this late period. Anu, the chief deity of Erech, continued to be foremost among the gods, as is shown by the fact that the property mentioned in the deeds is usually designated as the "possession of Anu," or, as is stated in the gift of a maid to the "house of gods," she was for "Anu and Antum and the great gods of Erech" (53:6). Another reason for believing that Anu was still par excellence in this age is the use made of his name in the composition of names.³

Eanna, the ancient sanctuary of Anu, however, is not mentioned in the personal names, and only once in the texts. Perhaps we must recognize the old fane in Bit-rêshu, "chief temple," which occurs quite frequently in these texts, but this remains to be determined. On the other hand, Ekur of Nippur is found in the name Ekur-zâkir, and Ebarra of Sippar, or Larsa, in Ebarra-shum-ibni, but it must be noted that these are family names, which apparently survived from an early date.

Besides Bit-rêshu, Bit-apgal is frequently mentioned, and in No. 22 also Bit-akitum ša ‘Ištar. In not a few texts Bit-ilâni, "house of gods," is referred to. The relative position, however, of these institutions cannot be determined from these texts. There also continued to be many temples or shrines in Erech dedicated to the different prominent deities of Babylonia (see below). These deities, however, do not figure prominently in the composition of names. Only a single name is compounded with Ellil or Illil,¹ the chief deity of Nippur, namely, Ušur-šû-Ellil, and it also should be noted that this individual is designated as one coming from Nippur (*mâr Nippur*², 4:20).

A very common practice in this period was to name the child after his father's father. Instances of naming the child after his father, for example, Anu-ab-ušur (50:22), are exceeding rare. The same is true of other periods. An instance of this is found in the Murashû documents, written in the fifth century B. C., namely, Bêl-ab-ušur. It is to be noted that, with the exception of the name of the deity, the two names are the same; in one instance it is Anu, and in the other it is Bêl, who is called upon to "protect the father." This may have been due to the father's illness.

There are a number of family names which occur quite frequently, such as Ah'utu, Ekur-zâkir, Kusû, Šadî, Sin-lâqi-unnînu, etc. These names do not seem to have been given to children. This, doubtless, was due to the fact that they are very old family names of Erech. This is shown by a single tablet, MLC. 2263, belonging to the fifth century, which is dated also at Erech, in the 38th year of Artaxerxes I. in which the family names of Ah'utu, Ekur-zâkir, Šadî and Sin-lâqi-unnînu occur.

In some instances the names of no less than four ancestors of persons are given for identification, for example, see No. 27:1, 2. Very frequently three are given, and especially when the individual bears the same name as his grandfather. The nomenclature seems to show that the time for coining new names had long since passed.

In a number of instances individuals are referred to as having assumed a second name. For example, following the name Nanâ-iddin (55:1) is written: ša šumi-šu ša-nu-ú "Di-me-ti-ri-ia, "Whose other name is Demetrius." He is the son of Nidintum-Anu, son of Tanittum-Anu, son of Ah'utu. Apparently his mother was a Greek. In line 10 of the same text, is found the name "Di-i-pa-tu-su apil "Ki-ip-lu-u-' ša šumi-šu ša-nu-ú "Anu-uballiṣ apil "Anu-balâṣu-iqbī. In this instance the father, who had borne a Babylonian name, took a second name, which was Greek. His son also had been given a Greek name.

The custom of assuming another name in this period is not confined to the issue of mixed marriages, for there were those who had good Babylonian names, who changed them to other Babylonian names; for example, "Anu-balâṣu-iqbī ša šumi-šu ša-nu-ú "Anu-īr-iddin, 50:24; "Anu-ab-uṣur ša šumi-šu ša-nu-ú "Tad-dan-nu, 50:26.

The Greeks apparently did not influence the culture of ancient Babylonian and Erech to any appreciable extent because as yet indications of this are wanting. The personal names, however, show that there were a number of Greeks who resided in Erech. Those found in the texts are of peculiar interest because of their cuneiform garb. In a majority of instances the identifications, which were made by the help of Dittenberger, Sylloge Inscriptionum Graecarum, Vol. III, and Fick-Bechtel, Die Griechischen Personennamen, seem clear. In the absence of anything better to offer for several of the names, question marks (?) follow the suggested identifications.

² See also A-ri-sak-, Ar-'-si-ug-qa, and also Ar-ša-ka-a and Ar-ša-kan, ZA. III, p. 147. It is to be noted that the Greek ending on σ is not found in any of the forms in Babylonian writing. My colleague, Prof. Oertel, raises the question whether the name represents the Persian Aršaka or belongs to a language of Asia Minor (Kretschmer, Einleitung, p. 359).

⁴ See also Di-me-e-di-ri-su, Di-e-mi-di-ri-su, Di-e-mi-id-ri-su, and Di-e-mid-ri-si.

⁶ See also Di-i-pa-ni'.

⁸ See also I-si-ra-te-u-nu and I-si-ra-tu'. A name Ἰσο-ροδον does not occur, and it is only offered as a suggestion, in view of such names as Ἰσόδημος, ῥίσιππος, etc.

¹⁰ I am indebted to Prof. Oertel for the suggestion of this identification. Cf. also Νικορράιος (Fick-Bechtel, p. 216).

¹¹ For the pronunciation of m=v in this name, cf. 𐎢𐎠𐎶=šamaš, 𐎢𐎠𐎶=Amurru, etc. If this identification is correct, the use of f at this time is interesting. Prof. Oertel, however,

Tim-gi-ra-te-e	Τιμοκράτης

The scholars who are interested in these names will make their own comparisons of the representations of the Greek letters in the Semitic Babylonian. For the benefit of those not familiar with the transliteration of the Babylonian, it might be said, that the vowel u represents the o as well as the u in that script.

As is known, the Greek stater was in use in Babylonia at this time. The form is-ta-tir-ru, reproduces well the Greek στατήρ, as in the Babylonian writing the prosthetic vowel was necessary, and the doubling of the r marks the accent. The usual form in which it is found is in the plural: is-ta-tir-ra-nu,¹ showing that the word was Babylonized.

In this connection it may be noted that several documents, long after Alexander's time, require that payment be made in silver staters of that monarch, for example, see No. 10, which is dated in the 37th year (Antiochus and Seleucus). See also No. 8, dated in the 35th year. In only one passage is the gold stater mentioned, namely, 53:15; and in this instance as a penalty provided in case of a misdeed.

A striking peculiarity of the tablets is the unusually large number of seal impressions found on all four edges of the documents. In this era besides the obligor, or the seller, all the witnesses were required to be represented by seal impressions.² Invariably the seal of the obligor or seller is found on the right edge; and if his son or anyone else is named as a guarantor (murruqu) in the document, his name and seal are also found on this edge. In connection with those of the witnesses on the remaining three edges of the tablets there has not been observed any particular order in making the impressions. As in other periods the scribe and obligee did not seal tablet.

thinks that it cannot represent the original f, but must be a glide vowel (as in Oscan tribara-kavúm, cf. Cyprian ijatera = ιατήρα); or if mu does not stand for vu, the second half of the name suggests the obscure hypocoristic Δάμμος, Δαμμώ (Fick-Bechtel, p. 183).

² No. 3 has two seal impressions of Nidintum-Anu on the L. E., but only one witness in the document bears that name. A few errors of this kind have been observed.

Another peculiarity in this period is the fact that in only a few instances is the family name of those who sealed the tablet given in connection with the seals. Naturally, the full genealogy is found in the contents of the document, and in such cases where more than one individual bore the same name, the ancients could identify them by the impression of their seals. This is not possible, however, in every instance at the present time, owing to the limited number of tablets at our disposal.

There is only a single impression of a cylinder seal on the tablets here published. It is that of Anu-aḥ-ushabshi on the right edge of No. 2, and resembles those found on the Murashû documents of the reign of Artaxerxes I and Darius II. In every other instance a seal or signet was used (see the heliotype reproductions).

The documents here published with only a few exceptions are identified with the temple, or temple property and income. While they record assignments of rights and transfers of property from one person to another, the stipulation that it is temple income, or the property of the deity, as well as the fact that frequently the house or estate is located in proximity to the temples, or shrines, or gates, or the courtyards of the gates, etc., seem to indicate that the documents belonged to the temple archives.

Nineteen of the documents here published refer to the assignment of rights to receive the offerings (isqu) made to temples or shrines in Erech. The practice of selling the right to render temple services, and to receive temple income, is known in Babylonia from early times. These rights or stipends were enjoyed apparently in connection with certain offices. Whether actual service was rendered by all who enjoyed the rights, or whether the grants were perpetually granted for service which had been originally rendered, remains a question. It would seem, however, that as some documents (e. g. Nos. 4 and 12) do not mention such offices in which service could be rendered, that perhaps in those instances at least, it was a right which was equivalent to holding stock in a company, in the modern sense of the term, the value of which depended upon the income. It is also quite possible that the temple at some time may have sold these rights.

Such practices are known to exist at present in India where temples are a source of considerable profit to the proprietors. Families who control them divide the proceeds among themselves; for example, each member of the Haldar family at Kali Ghat receives the offerings for a week or ten days at a time. On the great festival days all attend, and divide the receipts.

The rights granted were perpetual, with the exception of No. 47, which is given for ten years. The documents usually stipulate the day or days, or fraction of a day of the month, for the entire year (i. e. yearly); for example, in No. 4, the grant was for 1/4 of the 25th day, and for 1/12 of the 26th day; total 1/3 of a day, monthly. No. 8 is for 1/6 of a day on the 13th of the month. No. 40 is for 1/10 of a day on the 2nd of the month, etc. In No. 33, two brothers sell 2/3 of their grant; in which case the amount that it involved is mentioned. This is again assigned in No. 56 for the same consideration.

The offerings *isqu*¹ are described as ^hriqqu-ú-tu (8, 11), ^hrâb bânu-ú-tu (13), ^hban-nu-ú-tu (22), a-šî-pu-ú-tu (16), ^hTU-E-ú-tu (19, 24, 46), ša-qa-ai-tum (36), ^hnâš paṭru-ú-tu (40, 47), ^hLAḤ-NI-GAB-ú-tu (3), ^hNI-GAB-ú-tu (34), and ^hKIS-SIG-ú-tu (15). It is to be noted that the isqu ^hban-nu-ú-tu of No. 22 is sold to two ^hbânû, "builders." The office of riqqu-ú-tu apparently had something to do with vegetables. LAḪ-NI-GAB-ú-tu probably refers to the office of an overseer of cleaning, the NI-GAB-ú-tu or âtûtu to that of an overseer, the nâš paṣru-ú-tu to the sword bearer, ašipûtu to the diviner; but the significance of these terms in connection with the offerings made at the shrines remains to be determined.

The offerings were brought to the shrines of the gods that were worshipped in Erech. The longest list of deities mentioned in the texts, to whom offerings were brought, is in Nos. 40 and 55, as follows: Anu, Antum, Ellil, Ea, Sin, Shamash, Adad, Marduk, Papsukal, Ishtar, Bêlit-šêri, Nanâ, Bêlit-sha-rêshi, Šarra-aḫitum,¹ u ilâni bîti-šunu. The last expression, "gods of their houses," evidently means other minor deities, not mentioned, which were represented by shrines in the temples of the more important deities. This is used in connection with all the lists.

The list of deities in No. 46 is the same, except that Sin and Marduk are omitted. No. 47 mentions only four of these deities, Anu, Antum, Ellil, and Ea. Nos. 8, 11, 13, 16, and 22 mention Anu, Antum, Ishtar, Nanâ, Bêlit-sha-rêshi. No. 15 is also confined to those prominently identified with Erech, namely: Anu, Antum, Ishtar, Bêlit-šêri, Nanâ and Bêlit-sha-rêshi. No. 19 omits Anu and Antum and begins with Ellil, Ea, Sin, Shamash, Nergal, Marduk, Nanâ and Bêlit-sha-rêshi. In No. 29 Papsukal and AMA-SAQ-QA-NU-NU are the deities before whom the offerings were made, and as usual, "the gods of their shrines" are also mentioned.

The right to enjoy portions of the temple income was, therefore, not only limited to fractions of the income of certain days in the month, but also to certain shrines specified in the document. No. 55 is interesting in this connection, for it is stipulated that the TU-E-ú-tu and nâš paṣru-ú-tu offerings granted were those of Anu and Antum but the offerings of the other deities were only to be the TU-E-ú-tu.

These transactions imply that other records were necessarily kept by the temple to show what disposition was to be made of the incoming revenues. This is further illustrated by such documents as No. 22, in which the individual sold his entire part; but as it is not stipulated how much this involved, other temple records are necessarily implied.

It is also clear that these various institutions were conducted by the same executive officers, or in other words, that they came under a single management. The first of the translations given below will illustrate this class of documents.

No less than seventeen of the texts are deeds of transfer, recording the sale of property.¹ More than half these documents show that the property was located in proximity to the Ishtar gate. Other texts identify the property with the Shamash gate (21:2), the Anu gate (3:3), the Market gate (54:2), the North gate (48:3), the gate of the entrance to Bit-rêsh (9:2), the temple of Adad (18:1), the temple of Ninkigal (54:3), etc., all in Erech.

In some deeds the exact size of the property is given, and in others only the boundaries. The description in every instance is according to the following order: North, South, West, and East.² The numerals are used in Nos. 41, 43, 45, instead of the names of the cardinal points, as follows: II, I, IV, and III. This points to the fact that in earlier times, as is known,³ the order was IM I=South, IM II=North, IM III=East, and IM IV=West. It is to be noted that in every description the long sides of an estate face North, and South; and that the Northwest is always considered the elevated portion of the land.

As stated above, it is likely that all the property, although this is not mentioned in some of the documents, was known as property of the deity (buši 'Anu). Very probably a ground rent was due the temple, perhaps dating from a time when the crown treated all owners of property as fiefs, and required the temples to exact what was imposed upon them. Probably reference to this is to be found in No. 29, where an isqu is assigned which consisted of boiled (bašalla) and raw (balu) flesh of sheep, which was brought for one qaštum, "bowman," to the temple. A single illustration of the deeds of transfer of property or warranty deeds is the second of the translations.

The third translation is that of a partition of an estate (No. 24). The document is represented by a duplicate in the collection (MLC. 2204). Seventeen seals are found on each tablet. They are placed exactly in the same order on both tablets. The scribe, however, made a mistake in writing the last name on the upper edge. He repeated the name Anu-uballiṣ instead of writing Anu-aḥ-iddannu.

The fourth translation is of a deed of exchange (No. 35): Another document of this class is No. 45. The fifth (No. 44) is that of a release against any claim that might be made by the grantor. Nos. 27 and 31 are similar documents. The sixth is a deed of gift in which a girl slave is presented to the temple (No. 53); and the seventh is the same, referring to a gift to an individual (No. 6), see also Nos. 7 (a duplicate), 5, and 50. The eighth translation is that of a bill of sale of a slave (No. 25), see also Nos. 2 and 10; and the ninth is that of a lease of a house. The remaining two texts are, a record of a debt or promissory note No. 51, and a document referring to labor done for the temple, No. 17.
